Switzerland

Regional Co-Chair

Paolo Basso (see judges, p4)

SWITZERLAND'S INCREASED DWWA presence this year (305 entries compared with 126 last year) is evidence of the producers' will to confront themselves with the international scene. The new generation of wine growers and oenologists is open to changes and new experiences and focused on improving quality. The Swiss vineyard is a patchwork of cultures and traditions where diversity mirrors the great richness on offer. In Switzerland, a broad variety of wines can be found, many – such as those recommended here – of international quality. From the famous Chasselas, which is versatile in food matching, or the excitement presented by Heida/Païen, or even the Bordeaux-style blends of the Tessin region in the south, Swiss wines offer a range of exceptional aromas, flavours and textures.

What should we buy from here?

Chasselas, from the French-speaking part of Switzerland, is a perfect wine as an aperitif that will take you through a meal of freshwater fish or sushi, and finally with a cheese course. You should always have some in your cellar. Increasingly sought after are the local Valais variety of Heida/Païen and Completer from Graubünden in the eastern part of Switzerland. These are great choices to match refined cuisine based on seafood or Italian pastas and risottos. And don't miss Shiraz blends with local grapes like Cornalin, Humagne and Diolinoir, plus fine varietal Merlots from Tessin/Ticino.

What should we leave on the shelf?

Traditional wines that have some residual sugar content: they are not dry and not sweet and not successful as either style. What makes it more difficult is that this sweetness isn't reflected on the label.

What should we keep an eye on?

It's a cliché, but all regions and wine styles in Switzerland are worth following. The current cycle of improvement is continuing year by year and quality is increasing noticeably. The efforts of the most dynamic and committed producers have been rewarded, too, with a Trophy and five Golds this year. But to truly appreciate the diversity and beauty of the Swiss vineyard, take a trip and enjoy the wine in situ!

● Adrian & Diego Mathier, Petite Arvin de Mollignon, Valais 2013 (13.5%)

POA Alpine Wines

Limpid, fruity, mineral and fine, with an aromatic nose of spice, flowers and yeasty lees notes.

The palate is sculpted and fresh, with juicy citrus and apple fruit allied with layers of more exotic lychee and mango, underscored by a compact seam of minerals.

● Didier Joris, Amigne, Vétroz, Valais 2014 (15%)

POA Alpine Wines

Mineral and flinty, lifted by delicious notes of lemon and mandarin which are spiky but fully ripe. There's a floral aspect to the weighty palate which has a fine mineral spine, integrated oak to enhance the full fruit, and a really, long-lasting finish.

● Provins, Maîtres de Chais, Heida, Valais 2013 (14%)

POA Alpine Wines

Aromas of citrus, toast, stone fruit, white flower blossom, herbs, honey, dried pineapple and just a hint of late-harvest aromas. A luxurious, richer style, this displays a lot of class, with tangy lemon acidity and really fantastic length.

● Provins, Clos Corbassières, Valais 2011 (15%)

POA Alpine Wines

Meaty and powerful, but stylish too, with a charming nose of jasmine, vanilla, red currant, strawberry jam, liquorice, leather and tobacco. There's exquisite concentration and length to the palate, with the dark fruit augmented by black olive, varnish and chocolate.

● Provins, Tourbillon, Valais 2011 (12%)

POA Alpine Wines

Complex and effusive nose of lemon marmalade, peach, honeysuckle, apricot and spice. Very sweet – nectar-like even – yet refreshing too, with finely balanced acidity and unctuous, honey-coated fruit draped in cinnamon. Delicious stuff.

Tuscany

Regional Co-Chair

Monty Waldin (see judges, p4)

THIS WAS THE strongest line-up of Tuscan wines – red, white and even rosé – I can remember: seven Trophies and 12 Golds! Tuscan growers seem to be helping their vines cope with global warming and a string of bakingly hot recent vintages by getting more flavour and freshness into their wines, especially reds, all the way from everyday Chianti, via the more serious Chianti Classicos right up to the super-premium Brunello di Montalcinos, Maremmas, Cortonas and Bolgheri Rossos. The best showed ripeness rather than over-ripeness, perfectly judged oak and terrific, mouthwatering ripe and savoury flavours. The cooler, wetter 2014 vintage produced a really strong showing of Vermentino and Vernaccia di San Gimignano dry whites, too.

What should we buy from here?

The 2010 vintage-of-the-century in Montalcino has produced Brunellos oozing class, elegance and simply incredible perfumes. Chianti Classico beat its more heavily oak-aged Chianti Classico Riserva counterpart for brightness of fruit, drinkability and value for money. At the everyday end of the price scale, Sangiovese showed what a great grape it is for savoury Rosato Toscano pinks. The trend for Tuscan producers to season Sangiovese reds with native grapes like Malvasia Nera, Colorino, Canaiolo Nero and Cilieggiolo has led to subtler flavours and fresher, more savoury textures than would be the case if the wines were simply beefed up with over-ripe French imports like Merlot.

What should we leave on the shelf?

While 2010 is a wonder vintage for Brunello, 2009 is more problematic. The heat created moreish but much simpler tannins than in 2010. Don't expect these wines to age indefinitely. Basic Chianti should offer good-value everyday drinking but becomes a trial if Sangiovese's delightful red fruits get blurred by aggressive tannins from winemakers needlessly try getting too much colour into the wines. Most Morellino di Scansano vineyards belong to big houses from Chianti Classico, Montalcino and San Gimignano. They claim they do not treat Morellino as an afterthought – so why does this Sangiovese-based wine so obviously lack a clear identity?

What should we keep an eye on?

On this evidence Bolgheri imperiously proved it is the best place in Tuscany – and perhaps the whole of Italy – for premium and super-premium French-influenced blends. The mass of vines planted in the mid- to late-1990s boom have reached maturity. Hence the best wines show inherent old-vine richness, complexity and sinew. Bolgheri's winemakers are extracting finer grape tannins and using new oak with greater sensitivity – less overall, and tighter barrel selections when blending to avoid green or burned oak notes. The resulting wines show voluptuous smoothness, intense flavours of mint, cherry and garrigue, and undoubted class.

Gold white

● Il Colombaio di Santachiara, Campo della Pieve, Vernaccia di San Gimignano 2013 (13%)

This is a lovely effort, the slightly reductive edge adding to the appeal and bringing further complexity to complement the almond, pear, lemon yoghurt and tropical fruit palate. It's zingy, textured, balanced, creamy and ticks every box.

Gold red

● Abbazia Ardenga, Brunello di Montalcino 2010 (14.5%)
POA Anthony Byrne

Glossy and modern, with lovely perfume and ripe yet fresh cherry fruit bolstered by notes of expensive oak and liquorice. Savoury and understated, this is full of well-harnessed power, with fine tannins propping up the sour cherry flavours. Ethereal, pure and delicious.

● Campo alla Sughera, Toscana 2009 (14.5%)
£67.30 Mondial

$145 Curious Cork Imports USA
Concentrated and complex with ripe plum, cherry fruit, sticky berries and a shadier touch of forest floor. The sweet, ripe blackberry and cherry palate is wrapped in silky tannins, complemented by herbs and chocolate. This speaks of old vines; there's no stress in this beauty.

● Cennatoio, Etrusco, Sangiovese Toscana 2012 (14%)
POA Siema Wines USA

A hugely gratifying Sangiovese, with an elegant nose of red fruits, fresh mint, tobacco leaves, tar, leather, graphite and spicy oak. Dark, forest fruit compote graces the front palate which has an old-vine richness and sweetness to it, with a veneer of vanilla and a liquorice tang at the end.

● Ceralti, Sonoro, Bolgheri Superiore 2012 (15%)
£41 Sardinia Wines
Rich and ripe with a core of chocolatey black fruit lined with fine, polished oak nuances and mouthwatering cassis fruit. ➤
